BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORY NOTE:

Henry Hathaway (1898 – 1985) was born Henri Leopold de Fiennes on March 13, 1889, in Sacramento, California, to actress Jean Weil and stage manager Henry Rhody. He started his career as a child film actor in 1911. In 1915 Hathaway quit school and went to work at Universal Studios as a laborer, later becoming a property man. He was recruited for service during World War I in 1917, Hathaway saw his time in the army as an opportunity to get an education. He was never deployed, contracting the flu during the 1918 influenza pandemic. After being discharged from the army in 1918, Hathaway pursued a career in financing but returned to Hollywood to work as a property man at Samuel Goldwyn Studios and Paramount Studios. By 1924 Hathaway was working as an Assistant Director at Paramount Studios, under directors such as Josef von Sternberg, Victor Fleming, Frank Lloyd, and William K. Howard.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE:

The Henry Hathaway Collection consists of two series, Series 1: Annotated Scripts and Series 2: Scrapbooks. The annotated scripts include production notes, correspondence, storyboards, and photographs that span from 1932-1971, encompassing over eighty percent of Hathaway’s films. The scripts provide insights into the various stages of script development. The scrapbooks include press clippings, correspondence, photographs, promotional materials, production stills, programs, and research materials, relating to the production, promotion, and reception of Hathaway’s various films spanning from 1934-1949. The photographs in the scrapbooks provide insight into Hathaway’s personal and professional life. Some loose items are present within the volumes of this collection.

The original order of the materials was maintained throughout the collection. The materials are arranged in two series: annotated scripts and scrapbooks. Each series is arranged by film title, with working titles in brackets, chronologically by release date. The 84 volumes are stored alphabetically by series in the Ahmanson reading room, within the Louis B. Mayer Library.
